FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Colleagues,

This year's meeting in Austin will feature the research of our archaeological community and opportunities to connect with each other and the local area. In addition to our traditional programming, the meeting will also introduce a new event and expanded workshops.

Saturday afternoon we will hold our free Public Archaeology Day, an opportunity for all to explore Austin's history through activities and talks from local archaeologists. We are excited to create programming for children and the Austin community that centers around our field. The SAFE Institute, which helps build safe, harassment-free, inclusive workplaces, will hold workshops on Wednesday and Friday. There is a small fee to attend, the proceeds of which go directly to support survivors of sexual assault, child abuse, domestic violence, and human trafficking. More information about the workshop and what will be covered is located on page 11. You can also stop by the SAFE Institute's table in the registration area to find out more about their organization.

Enjoy looking through this document to learn about the workshops, excursions, and networking opportunities SAA has planned (including the Student Welcome Reception hosted by the SAA Board of Directors and Cambridge University Press). To provide more valuable and real-time information, the list of sessions can be found at www.saa.org/preliminaryprogram; 2020 meeting policies and procedures will also be posted here.

I look forward to welcoming you to Austin and hope to see you at my opening President's Forum, “What Is at Stake? The Impacts of Inequity and Harassment on the Practice of Archaeology,” on Wednesday evening at 6:30 p.m.

Joe E. Watkins, PhD, RPA
President

FROM THE ANNUAL MEETING PROGRAM CHAIR

Dear Colleagues:

As program chair for the 2020 Annual Meeting, I am delighted to mention some highlights of this year's meeting. The program will begin on Wednesday evening with the President's Forum, "What Is at Stake? The Impacts of Inequity and Harassment on the Practice of Archaeology." This is an important opportunity to consider a very salient topic in the life of our discipline, and I encourage everyone to attend. In addition, I have had a first-hand look at the more than 300 sessions that will run from 8:00 a.m. until noon and from 1:00 to 5:00 p.m. on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. The Thursday evening sessions will run from 6:00 to 10:00 p.m., and our Sunday morning sessions from 8:00 a.m. to noon. The Program Committee and I took particular care and attention to think about how as a Society we can help provide guidance and assistance to students and early career archaeologists for professional development. Resources relevant to this topic will be called out in the final program. The Society has also taken a fresh look at the workshops this year, with the goal of providing more useful training for both our professional and scientific challenges. I would also like to specifically highlight several sessions on recent technological developments and innovations as well as the CRM Expo on Saturday afternoon. This is always a great opportunity to touch base with colleagues and potential employers and partners.

See you in Austin!

Matthew S. Bandy, Program Committee Chair
SWCA Environmental Consultants

FROM THE LOCAL ADVISORY CHAIR

Dear Colleagues,

Austin, Texas, welcomes you back for the 85th Annual Meeting of the Society for American Archaeology. It's only been five years, but in that time the city has continued to grow, and you will find myriad new places, flavors, and sounds alongside old favorites. We encourage everyone to explore Austin, and to assist we will have four different tours focusing on Austin and Texas's long and rich archaeological heritage.

Join local archaeologists for a walking tour of downtown Austin exploring the intersection of the modern city with the over 12,000 years of human occupation that preceded it. Or take a behind-the-scenes tour of the Texas Archeological Research Laboratory at the University of Texas at Austin and the Gault School of Archaeological Research and explore the millions of artifacts collected over the past 100 years and the recent investigations of the renowned Gault Site. A third tour will take you to the Bullock Texas State History Museum for a guided tour of the Becoming Texas exhibit and a unique opportunity to learn about cutting edge interpretation and recording of Texas's unparalleled rock art resources by staff of the Shumla Archaeological Research and Education Center. Finally, for those who want to escape the Austin city limits, a tour to San Marcos will provide a glass-bottom boat tour of Spring Lake and an opportunity to visit Texas State University’s Meadows Center for Water and the Environment and the archaeological collections at the Center for Archeological Studies.

No matter what you do, we are sure you will have wonderful time. See y'all in April!

Bradford M. Jones, Local Advisory Chair
Texas Historical Commission–Archaeology Division

NOTE ON CHEMICAL SENSITIVITY
Given the large number of attendees expected in Austin, SAA requests participants be aware of the effects of strong synthetic fragrances or chemicals. If possible, please refrain from using perfume, cologne, or other heavily scented products when attending conference events to help make these proceedings accessible to all participants, including those for whom these products pose health risks.

MEETING REGISTRATION

Meeting registration is required to attend or participate in the SAA 85th Annual Meeting. Advance registration is strongly recommended—you’ll avoid on-site lines, save on registration fees, and improve your chances of admission into certain ticketed events. Advance registration forms must be received in the SAA office no later than Thursday, March 19, 2020. After that date, you must register on-site, and on-site rates apply. Advance registrants may pick up a registration packet at the Advance Registration desk in the ACC Solar Atrium. Registration packets include meeting badge, tickets for events that require preregistration, and a printed copy of the Final Program. You will need to provide a photo ID. Badges are required for admission to all SAA session spaces, the exhibit hall, workshops, special events, and excursions.

To pick up your badge, you will need to show photo identification. To respond to member calls for the meeting to be a safer environment, SAA will require registrants to present a photo ID (e.g., student ID, driver’s license, passport, or other document with a photograph and your name) in order to pick up their registration materials. Staff and volunteers will not be able to release badges to individuals who say they are picking up for others. All registrants must pick up their materials in person and present their IDs. In the case of guest badges, the main registrant will need to be present to pick up the guest badge, as guest badges are included with the overall registration materials. Please remember to bring a photo ID to the registration desk when registering on-site or picking up advance registration materials. For any exceptions or if you have any questions about this process, please contact meetings@saa.org.

Program participants were required to register for the meeting when proposals were submitted and should not pay the registration fee a second time. Program participants can add workshops, excursions, special events, and receptions onto their existing registration by logging on to the Advance Registration website or by completing the enclosed registration form.

What Is at Stake? The Impacts of Inequity and Harassment on the Practice of Archaeology
Research and reporting on equity and harassment in the academy and across various fields in both public and private sectors reveals the extent of chronic inequalities and significant problematic behaviors in various workplace settings. Groups most negatively affected by these inequities and often illegal behaviors are women, the LGBTQ+ community, and underrepresented racial and ethnic groups. For archaeologists, workplace settings include many locales (offices, labs, classrooms, field sites, conferences) and thus many potential sites for inequity, harassment, and assault to occur. To be clear, this is a broad disciplinary issue affecting the very performance of archaeology. In addressing this looming and serious problem, this session brings together a wide range of practicing students and professionals to consider (1) equity (e.g., gender pay gap, publication/citation practices) and (2) sexual harassment and assault (e.g., as experienced and perpetrated by different subgroups, effects on professional outcomes, effective training/reporting, resources for survivors). Wherever possible, presenters discuss recommendations at several scales (e.g., individuals, workplaces, field settings, conferences). We hope that highlighting these issues at the forefront of our annual meeting will make evident that inequity and harassment affect all practitioners and open a dialogue on these issues that continues throughout and beyond the conference itself.

POSTERS AFTER HOURS

Preliminary rounds begin at 7:30 a.m., with the final round taking place from 1:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m. Graduate and undergraduate students are invited to organize a team of 3–5 participants with a faculty mentor to take part in the annual SAA Ethics Bowl. New this year: This year, the SAA Committee on Ethics, the Register of Professional Archaeologists, and the Task Force on the Revisions of the SAA Principles of Archaeological Ethics II invite practicing and professional archaeologists to take part in the discussion. Join us after the final round of the 2020 Ethics Bowl from 3:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. for a forum led by former contestants, judges, and supporters to discuss lessons learned from the SAA Ethics Bowl through the years. The forum will be a conversation during which archaeologists of all sectors can confer on past, current, and future trends in the ethics of our discipline. We will address the challenges of navigating ethics in practice as well as ideas about what role... our core ethical principles may play in today’s changing world. It will also be an opportunity to celebrate the outstanding achievements of the student teams.

Talk to archaeologists about their work while picking up posters, stickers, and fun educational resources. This event is free and does not require a meeting registration. For questions or ways that you can participate, please contact public_edu@saa.org.

Texas organizations participating in the event include the Texas Historical Commission, Texas Archeological Society, Texas Parks and Wildlife, San Antonio Missions National Historical Park, Texas Department of Transportation, Shumla Archaeological Research and Education Center, and others. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22

Geoarchaeology and Paleoecology of the Deeply Stratified Richard Beene Site
Sponsored by the Geoarchaeology Interest Group
8:00 a.m.–5:00 p.m.; maximum 52 persons; $88.00; lunch will be provided

Dr. Rolfe D. Mandel and Dr. Alston V. Thoms will lead a field trip to the Richard Beene archaeological site next to the Medina River on the south side of San Antonio. Extensive excavations have been conducted at the site, sampling well-stratified hunter-gatherer components ranging from Angostura to Late Prehistoric. Also, there are remains of historic-era structures and occupations dating from the Spanish colonial to the early Anglo-American and African American eras. In all, 20 distinct TARL collections including a sampling of the tour group, with a general tour of the museum’s underutilized fiber/perishable collections. A discussion on the dynamic between hidden collections and fiber/perishable artifact studies will take place during lunch after the tour. Participants will have the opportunity to purchase lunch from on-site food trailers.

FRIDAY, APRIL 24
Texas Prehistory Underwater: The Meadows Center and Center for Archeological Research
8:00 a.m.–1:00 p.m.; maximum 40 persons; $44.00

Archaeology is only beginning to explore the potential of submerged paleo-landscapes as resources for understanding the prehistoric past. This excursion foregrounds research on submerged prehistoric sites beginning at Texas State University’s Meadows Center for the Water and Environment, where participants will enjoy a glass-bottom boat tour of beautiful Spring Lake in San Marcos and a tour of the Meadows Center. Once famous for a diving pig, this natural spring has been the site of human occupation for at least 10,000 years and the subject of early underwater excavations by archaeologist Joel Shiner. Participants will be guided by archaeologists, who will discuss the larger panorama of current studies of underwater sites in Texas and the technology that is making it possible. Participants will then travel to the nearby Center for Archeological Studies at Texas State University, where Shiner’s recently rehabilitated collections from the Spring Lake site are curated and will be hosted by the center staff who will make these and other artifacts available for view during a behind-the-scenes tour of the curatorial facility and lab.

SATURDAY, APRIL 25

Austin Underground: A Mostly Walking Tour of Austin’s Archaeological Roots
8:00 a.m.–12:00 p.m.; maximum 28 persons; $38.00

This tour provides participants with a local view of Austin with a walking and riding tour guided by local archaeologists. Beginning just outside the conference hotel at the City of Austin’s Joseph and Susanna Dickinson Hannig House Museum and the O’Henry Museum, excursionists get a tour of the site and introduction to the local history and archaeology. From there the tour will travel to Republic Square during the Saturday SFC Farmers’ Market to talk about the Segovia tortilla factory and Walker’s Austex Chili—places important to the growing Mexican American community that profoundly influenced the way Austinites ate in the early twentieth century. At Republic Square participants will have an opportunity to explore local vendors and sample fresh produce and artisanal products. From there the tour will continue toward the city hall area, where archaeology has been key in telling the story of Austin in the nineteenth century and particularly Guy Town. Once the red-light district of nineteenth-century Austin, it was also a focus of commerce, where general stores like Schneider’s and Cuneo’s shaped the downtown community. Participants will have a chance to sample barbecue at Lambert’s and have a beer in the historic nineteenth-century Schneider beer vaults. Traveling through the location of the new city library and Seaholm redevelopment site, the tour will cross Lady Bird Lake on the Lamar Street pedestrian bridge, giving one the best views of the city. From there we will stop by the historic Paggi House before completing a walk along the lake and Barton Creek to Austin’s iconic Barton Springs Pool at Zilker Park. At the springs, archaeologists will discuss the excavations and public outreach while exploring the pool and historic structures that surround it. Participants will be returned to hotel via bus, but they will have time to enjoy the park or the pool if they so wish.

Presenting Texas’s Earliest Histories: The Rock Art of the Lower Pecos and the Shumla Archaeological Research and Education Center/Becoming Texas
1:00 p.m.–5:00 p.m.; maximum 40 persons; $30.00

Perhaps Texas’s most underappreciated archaeological heritage is the long and rich tradition of rock art that is found throughout the Lower Pecos region of the state. In the past decade, researchers with Shumla Archaeological Research and Education Center have been developing new methods of rock art recording and interpretation that have led to breakthroughs in the study and interpretation of these irreplaceable works of art. Though nothing can replace the experience of enjoying these places firsthand, with this excursion we have tried to bring the rock art of the Lower Pecos closer to you. Participants will travel to the

Connect with Your Colleagues in a Relaxed Atmosphere
Bullock Texas State History Museum—a mere 10 minutes in Austin traffic instead of the 4 hours to Comstock—for a special event hosted by the museum and the staff of the Shumla Archaeological Research and Education Center. Shumla staff will present their research and groundbreaking analysis of the rock art of the Lower Pecos, and they will discuss their current effort—the Alexandria Project—that is undertaking a comprehensive digital survey of the Lower Pecos to create a permanent record of this endangered resource. In addition to visual presentation and discussion of the art, participants will have an opportunity to look “behind the scenes” at the technological tools and methods being used to record the rock art with demonstrations by staff. Participants will then be provided ample time to enjoy a “guided” tour of the museum’s new first-floor Becoming Texas exhibit, featuring artifacts spanning from the earliest evidence of human occupation of the state until Mexican independence in 1821. Highlights include a 16,000-year-old projectile point from the Gault Site, unique archeological artifacts from the collections of the Texas Archeological Research Laboratory, the conserved hull and artifacts from the seventeenth-century French shipwreck La Belle, and historic and modern collections representing the diverse cultural heritage of the people of the state. During the tour, archaeologists and curators associated with the exhibits will be on hand to provide personal insights on the collections and challenges of developing such an exhibit.

WORKSHOPS

SAA workshops provide continuing education on a wide range of practical issues relevant to the professional archaeological community. Workshops have limited enrollments, so sign up soon! As noted, specific workshops are open to both meeting attendees and those not attending the meeting.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22

Repatriation Workshop
Sponsored by the Committee on Native American Relations and the Committee on Repatriation
11:00 a.m.–2:00 p.m.; maximum 25 persons; $28 for Annual Meeting attendees

Instructors: Kristen Barnett and Lauren Sieg

The 2020 repatriation workshop will be an opportunity for examining the specific perspectives and challenges for repatriation in Texas and discussing their relationship to broader repatriation concerns in the United States and abroad. It is intended to establish respectful and collaborative partnerships between the SAA and local tribal communities associated with the locale of our annual meeting.

The workshop will be open to meeting attendees who are repatriation practitioners and will include the participation of local tribal leadership. The specific content of the workshop will be customized according to the responses to an independent survey submitted to local Tribal Historic Preservation Officers or tribal NAGPRA representatives, local museum professionals, federal agency representatives, universities, regional professional archaeological societies, and CRM firms. The survey is aimed at identifying local concerns, barriers, and challenges to repatriation.

The workshop facilitators will consist of the chairs of CNAR and the Committee on Repatriation as well as local tribal officials. The workshop activities will include small-group and large-group discussions as well as exercises aimed at realizing the multitude of challenges for different entities (e.g., tribal, government, and private) and how we can collaborate to address these issues. We will also reflect on how we currently situate ourselves and what our goals should be as SAA members in relation to the results of the survey. The workshop will facilitate an ongoing dialogue that will allow us, as SAA members, to identify our aspirations for how to address concerns and work toward a more equitable process in the future.

A Gentle Introduction to Bayesian Statistics for Archaeologists
12:30 p.m.–2:30 p.m.; maximum 20 persons; $50 for Annual Meeting attendees

Instructors: Ben Utting and Ben Marwick

Statistical approaches toward interpreting archaeological data have traditionally relied on null hypothesis significance testing (NHST). However, recent papers have raised several critiques of NHST, arguing that it is both unintuitive to interpret and promotes dichotomous thinking (i.e., significant or not significant). A Bayesian framework offers techniques that, while computationally intensive, allow for more intuitive and detailed interpretations of data. As adjacent scientific fields move away from NHST and toward Bayesian statistical frameworks, it is crucial that we as archaeologists develop the basic tools required to (1) interpret Bayesian analyses and (2) develop those of our own. This session will provide SAA members with a gentle introduction to the philosophical underpinnings of Bayesian statistics, an interactive demonstration of how Bayesian modeling works with archaeological data, and a primer on R and its free software packages that offer Bayesian alternatives to common frequentist tests (e.g., t-test, chi-square test, ANOVA, linear regression).
Unmanned aerial systems (UAS; “drones”) are becoming popular alternatives to purchase of satellite and airborne remotely sensed data for archaeological applications due to their increasing capabilities and decreasing costs. With an increase in accessibility to researchers and cultural resource management professionals, questions regarding sensor systems comparison and cost-benefits proliferate: would flying my own photogrammetric survey, hiring a UAS lidar survey, or purchasing an airborne lidar dataset best benefit my project’s topographic data needs? What’s the difference between and utility of visible light (RGB), thermal, multispectral, and hyperspectral sensor imagery? Would a more expensive sensor and UAS platform be worth the cost? What software is best to meet my project goals given the datasets I have? The research required to answer these questions can be overwhelming.

This workshop will focus on UAS-based sensors and their archaeological applications. Using examples, instructors will • introduce various sensor and platform types and combinations • provide an overview of suitability for conditions, environments, and project goals • review availability and cost • present the trajectory of their use in projects, from data collection to data processing and product generation
Parasitology and Archaeology: A Workshop in Parasite Recovery and Identification
2:00 p.m.–4:00 p.m.; maximum 20 persons; $30 for Annual Meeting attendees

Instructors: Karl Reinhard and Dong Hoon Shin

The workshop will feature two types of demonstrations: microscopes and models. At microscopes, parasite eggs will be shown from Korean mummies, Southwestern coprolites, and historic privies from New England. Tapeworm, roundworm, and flatworm eggs will be viewed. Teaching models of these classes of parasites will be associated with the microscopes to show participants the morphology and size of the adult parasites. Models of pathology, and specimens of modern parasites, will be on display as well. Modern specimens and exhibits will be on loan from the Manter Laboratory of Parasitology, University of Nebraska State Museum. These displays will be organized in distinct sections. First, Dr. Dong Hoon Shin’s display of parasites from South Korean mummies will be complemented with examples of adult fluke slides. Second, the Andean parasites will be on display including tapeworms and lice. The participants can then turn to tapeworms with a model of proglottid anatomy, which they can compare with microscope slides. Third, from the southwestern USA and northwestern Mexico, slides of human pinworm and various other parasites will be visible. Finally, mawworm and whipworm eggs from New England shaft features will round out the practical demonstration. There will be slides representing egg decomposition to address taphonomy. The small posters will present the diversity of parasites found at archaeological sites. The health threats of parasitism will also be addressed in the posters. Field and lab methods will be addressed, focusing on shaft features and the best stratigraphic strategies to locate parasite deposits.

SATURDAY, APRIL 25

Using tDAR for Research
Sponsored by the Center for Digital Antiquity
9:00 a.m.–10:30 a.m.; maximum 25 persons; free for SAA members; preregistration required; walk-ins welcome on a seat-available basis

Instructors: Leigh Anne Ellison and Rachel Fernandez

In the past 20 years, archaeology fieldwork, lab processing, and analysis have changed dramatically, driven primarily by developments in technology, computing, and the internet. tDAR is one of the tools that can help you integrate and successfully analyze your data in this changing environment. We view the files archived in tDAR as DATA—and our aim is to encourage the use of these digital collections (datasets, reports, GIS data, images, etc.) to further your research. This hands-on workshop will provide an overview as well as specific examples of the ways you can use tDAR to enhance your research.

The workshop will cover a number of important topics including:

- improving the usability of the files you upload (formats, documentation, organizing your collections, licenses)
- good metadata lowers the barrier for use by others (explaining dataset codes, field collection methods, etc.)
- literature review of a geographic area
- finding data in tDAR
- sharing your “value-added” improvements (creating ontologies and coding sheets and making them public)
- ethics of sharing and data openness
- confidentiality and security

Teaching Integrity in Empirical Archaeology
Sponsored by the Open Science in Archaeology Interest Group
12:00 p.m.–2:00 p.m.; maximum 25 persons; free for Annual Meeting attendees; preregistration required; walk-ins welcome on a seat-available basis

Instructors: Ben Marwick and Li-Ying Wang

This workshop is designed for educators who are interested in integrating principles of transparency and reproducibility into teaching archaeology. We will introduce participants to protocols for conducting and documenting empirical research that ensures the reproducibility of all computational results, and then present a range of pedagogical strategies and curricular resources for teaching these methods to students in a variety of educational settings. The objective is to help instructors develop plans for teaching reproducible research practices that will be feasible and effective in their particular contexts, so that they are fully prepared to implement the methods presented at the workshops when they return to their home institutions.

Participants will also be introduced to opportunities to collaborate with the SAA Open Science in Archaeology Interest Group in the development and dissemination of curricular resources for practicing and teaching transparent research methods. The ultimate goal is to foster the development of a community of educators committed to the idea that transparency and reproducibility should be integrated into all levels of research training for students in archaeology.

My signature below also constitutes my express consent for SAA to use my personal data to provide its programs and services. For example, SAA will use meeting registration data to print badges and the program. I understand that I may contact SAA at any time at membership@saa.org to have my personal data removed from its database or to ask how SAA will use my data. I understand a request to erase data will terminate a membership because SAA will not be able to mail any print publications and provide online benefits. Users may opt-out of specific e-mail communications as detailed in the SAA Privacy Policy.

I am not and have not ever been the subject of adverse findings from a discrimination or harassment lawsuit or administrative complaint; and I have not been found at fault in a disciplinary action, such as suspension or termination of registration resulting from a Register of Professional Archaeologists’ grievance investigation.

I have reviewed and accept the terms of the SAA Privacy Policy (www.saa.org/PrivacyPolicy).
